

Staff photojournalist Spencer A. Burnett, has been a member of the NEW YORK POST since 1994. As a freelance photojournalist his work has appeared in the NEW YORK TIMES, DAILY NEWS, THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, US NEWS & WORLD REPORT, UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, BERGEN RECORD and HEART & SOUL MAGAZINE. He has won awards from the New York Press Photographers Association and the Library of Congress International Library of Photography. He was honored by having two of his photographs exhibited in the baseball Hall of Fame, in Cooperstown, New York. Most recently, Mr. Burnett's sports photographs of world tennis champions, Venus and Serena Williams, are published in "Black Women in America," an Oxford University Press publication. As a former collegian and minor league baseball player, he embraced sports photography to display his love for the game, and continues to guide young people toward the art of photography.

To view the online gallery by Spencer A. Burnett please enter the following sites:

www.baseballhalloffame.org Then click on Exhibits and Collections, then click on Online Exhibits, then click on National Baseball Hall of Fame Photo Contest, then click on 2001 Contest.

Contact Spencer A. Burnett at (646) 372-0817 or e-mail on Spencer1@nextel.blackberry.net

Writing Sample